

Antisemitic rhetoric + extremist content online April 2025

Samdesk's analysts observed increased activity in a number of ISIS-linked channels known to amplify extremist content targeting Jewish institutions, among others. Activities of the Al-Saqri Foundation for Military Sciences, an online group identified by Europol as an affiliate of the Islamic State were first documented on Telegram in 2018 and were described as "wholly focused on advancing the militant knowledge base of jihadists." The group has historically preferred using darknet forums and closed group chats. As of late 2024, the group was observed creating channels and chats on alternative messaging platforms, including Element, Threema, Session, WhatsApp, and RocketChat. Notably, the Al-Saqri foundation launched a new Element channel titled "Military Preparation Course" (#MilitaryPreparation:matrix.org) on or before January 16, 2025. The channel has over 600 users as of March 25, 2025. Information gathered on this channel indicates that the group continues to operate a network of related channels across a number of platforms. The group also maintains a number of bots directing users to new channels as old ones are periodically purged. Analysts identified at least one clearnet domain actively cataloguing some of the group's resources and bots.

In these channels, the Al-Saqri Foundation disseminates and amplifies extremist material, including how-to guides on improvised explosives and chemical weapons, sabotage techniques, and combat tradecraft. Recent content is increasingly published in English, or in a mix of English and Arabic, and identifies specific European and North American suppliers as the preferred sources for the procurement of ingredients and components. Numerous references to suppliers such as Amazon, Walmart, Aliexpress, RadioShack, and various regional farm equipment vendors. Among others, the channel has shared instructions for:

- The manufacturing of primary explosives, including PETN, TNT, and C4
- The manufacturing, storage, and deployment of chemical and biological weapons, including Anthrax, Cyanide, and Ricin
- Building and usage of remote detonation infrastructure, including the use of radios, phones, and keyfobs
- Execution of sabotage, surveillance, evasion, and other combat tradecraft

At least one administrator operating a channel named (#the_kitchen:matrix.org) advertised a free guide curation service in March 2025. The administrator invited users to request specific instructions, to which the administrator would provide a number of related how-to guides of which instructions can be received in English.

Al-Saqri channels have previously circulated and endorsed content from outlets operated by militant groups, including articles from the al-Nabaa magazine – a weekly publication associated with the Islamic State, and posts from "Lion's Den" - an armed group active in the Gaza Strip since 2022. Some of the shared content explicitly encourages attacks on the Jewish community.

- An article from al-Nabaa shared in 2024 urged adherents to target "Jews", "Zionists", and other perceived adversaries, in places where they congregate. The article identified these locations as "synagogues" and "Jewish neighborhoods" in Jerusalem and Europe.
- A post from the Lion's Den Telegram group (t.me/areennabluss) instructed supporters to engage in a struggle to "scatter the flying flesh fragments" of "Jews" in "every inch of our holy earth." The message also addressed the "Sons of Zion," affirming that "this land is not yours (and) it has not even a place to bury your dead," and that returning to the "original homeland" is "much better than facing your fate in our land."

These observations are in line with the 2025 DNI Annual Threat Assessment, published on March 25. The DNI assessed that "Al Qa'ida in the Arabian Peninsula (AQAP) has relaunched its Inspire guide (...) that encourages attacks against Jewish targets, the United States, and Europe." The same report found that "Lebanese Hezbollah" has continued to pursue limited targeting of primarily Israeli and Jewish individuals outside of the Middle East."
